You might think

Thursday 23 July 2009 19:57

You might think why is this guy supporting the Iranian revolution du jour with a communist freedom twibbon tweeting in Chinese? I’m not. If you’re into brands and fonts you might have noticed the distinguished mutation of the two characters "e" in "Free", and that can only mean that is the Heineken font. So the star isn’t communist or something, that’s just part of the Heineken logo. And the green isn’t Iranian, that’s the green of the Heineken bottle. So we’re talking about "Free" in a beer context here. The internet isn’t about revolution, it’s about free beer if it’s even about something. Free as in beer being the sarcastic form of Libre.

And the chinese characters are just to avoid tldr, based on Kangxi radical names: Â¤ = Morning, Â¤ = Earth, Â¤ = Evening, Â¤ = Eat, Â¤Â¤Â¤Â¤Â¤Â¤ = WTFBBQ. You’ll figure it out.

by Roland van Ipenburg http://www.xs4all.nl/~ipenburg/blog/posts/play/2009/07/23/you–might–think/